Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 12 sedentary women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise at 60% of maximum HR. The control group consisted of 12 sedentary women who did not participate in the training program. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during exercise at 60% of maximum HR. The HR and EE were significantly higher in the training group than in the control group at rest and during exercise. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the HR and EE of sedentary, middle-aged women.

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or goal. This involves understanding the current situation and what needs to be achieved.

2. Next, it is important to gather relevant information and data. This can be done through research, interviews, or observation.

3. Once the information is gathered, the next step is to analyze it. This involves identifying patterns, trends, and potential causes.

4. After analysis, the next step is to develop a plan or strategy. This should be based on the findings from the analysis and the goal identified in the first step.

5. The final step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the strategy into action and monitoring progress.

6. Throughout the process, it is important to communicate and collaborate with others. This can help to ensure that everyone is on the same page and working towards the same goal.

7. Finally, it is important to evaluate the results of the process. This can help to determine if the goal was achieved and if the process was effective.
