Evidence for Present Climate Change

TABLE 11.1 Highlights of the 2013–2014 IPCC Fifth Assessment Report

Key Points of the Fifth Assessment Summary*

- Each of the last three decades has been successively warmer at the Earth's surface than any preceding decade since 1850.
 - Ocean warming dominates the increase in energy stored in the climate system, accounting for more than 90% of the energy accumulated between 1971 and 2010. Further uptake of carbon by the ocean will increase ocean acidification.
 - Over the last two decades, the Greenland and Antarctic ice sheets have been losing mass, glaciers have continued to shrink almost worldwide, and Arctic sea ice and Northern Hemisphere spring snow cover have continued to decrease in extent.
 - The rate of sea-level rise since the mid-nineteenth century has been larger than the mean rate during the previous two millennia. Over the period 1901–2010, global mean sea level rose by 0.19 m (0.6 ft).
 - The atmospheric concentrations of carbon dioxide (CO₂), methane, and nitrous oxide have increased to levels unprecedented in at least the last 800,000 years, primarily from fossil-fuel emissions and secondarily from net land-use-change emissions. The ocean has absorbed about 30% of the emitted anthropogenic carbon dioxide, causing ocean acidification.
 - Total radiative forcing is positive and has led to an uptake of energy by the climate system. The largest contribution to total radiative forcing is caused by the increase in the atmospheric concentration of CO₂ since 1750.
 - Warming of the climate system is unequivocal. Many of the temperature changes observed since the 1950s are unprecedented over decades to millennia. It is extremely likely (95%–99%) that human influence has been the dominant cause of the observed warming since the mid-twentieth century.
