Lesson Summary

Describing Populations

Basic Statistics Basic statistics study population. Ecologists study population growth, birth, death, immigration, emigration, and the carrying capacity.

Change after Change They give us a population size study of the geographic range. A population change study is important because they measure the population of individuals in a single habitat. A positive value indicates growth, and a negative value indicates a population of individuals has died or left the area. The geographic range can grow or shrink over time.

Growth Rate The number of organisms in a population change over time in a set geographic area. Population numbers can grow rapidly when resources are abundant, but they can slow down when resources are scarce.
