

Human Reproduction

Human reproduction

Human reproduction is sexual reproduction involving male and female reproductive cells called gametes. The reproductive system includes organs called gonads that produce gametes and hormones; ducts for transport, storage and transportation of gametes; accessory organs and glands for fluid secretion; and internal genitalia. Reproduction is regulated by hormones produced by the gonads, the hypothalamus and the pituitary gland. Fertilisation involves the introduction of sperm into the vagina. The sperm travels through the female reproductive tract until it encounters an ovum, a female sex cell. Fertilisation can then take place.

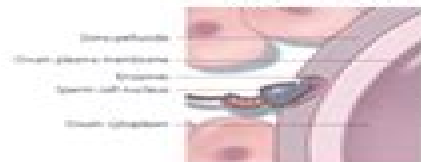

Male reproductive system

The adult male reproductive system is a complex of two primary external structures, the testes and the penis. The testes are divided into thousands of tiny compartments or lobules containing seminiferous tubules, tightly coiled structures where sperm formation takes place.

The testes are situated in a sac called the scrotum, which provides support and regulates the position of the testes relative to the body. The scrotum is located below the testes, near the perineum, to maintain the testes at a temperature lower than the body temperature for sperm formation.

Seminiferous tubules produce sperm cells, which are transported to the epididymis, a structure located on top of the testes. The epididymis is responsible for maintaining the structure and function of the sperm cells and promoting the development of male secondary sex characteristics.

Fusion of plasma membranes

Fertilization

The upper portion of the vagina leads to the canal for fertilisation. Millions of sperm travel through the female reproductive tract, following the path of the egg. When a sperm reaches the egg, it penetrates the egg's outer membrane, releasing enzymes. The sperm travels through a path made by the digestive action of the enzymes. When the cell membrane of the egg and sperm come in contact, the membranes fuse, and the sperm nucleus and associated material enter the egg. Other sperm are prevented from entering by a chemical change in the zona pellucida.

Female reproductive system

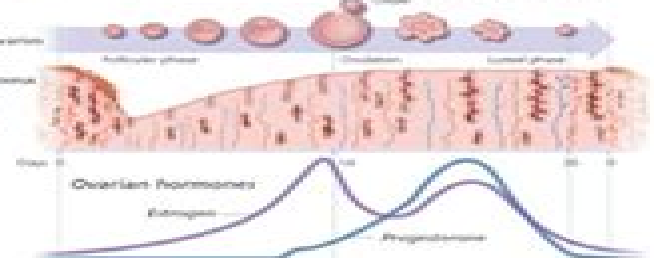

The internal structure of the adult female reproductive system includes the vagina, uterus, ovaries and fallopian tubes. These structures form a pathway allowing the release of an egg cell, fertilisation, its growth and delivery of a developed fetus. The vagina is a muscular canal that leads from the uterus to the outside of the body. It is the lower part of the uterus. It channels through the cervix allows the passage of sperm and menstrual discharge. The uterus is a hollow pear-shaped organ with muscular walls that contract during childbirth. The lower part of the uterus is the cervix, which is the opening into the vagina. During each menstrual cycle, the lining of the uterus is shed, which is the menstrual period. This lining is shed during menstruation if fertilisation does not occur.

Spermatozoon

The ovaries, located on each side of the uterus, are responsible for producing ova as well as the female sex hormones estrogen and progesterone. Estrogen is responsible for the development of the female reproductive structures, menstrual characteristics, and breast development. Progesterone prepares the uterus lining for implantation of a fertilized egg and is necessary for breast milk production. The ovaries are connected to the uterus by the ovarian tubes, narrow ducts that provide a passageway for the egg to reach the uterus.

Ovulation phases

Ovulation & the menstrual cycle

The menstrual cycle refers to the sequence of events that occurs in the endometrium, the lining of the uterus. The cycle normally lasts approximately 28 days. The purpose is to prepare the uterus for possible pregnancy. The menstrual cycle is governed by the endocrine system. If fertilisation does not occur, decreasing estrogen and progesterone levels initiate menstruation and the cycle begins again.

Sex determination

Sex determination

Each parent contributes one sex chromosome. The mother always contributes an X sex chromosome, while the father contributes either an X or a Y sex chromosome. An XX combination produces a girl, while a XY combination produces a boy.
