McKinney: Evolve Resources for Maternal-Child Nursing, 6th Edition

MULTIPLE CHOICE

1. Which factor significantly contributed to the shift from home births to hospital births in the early 20th century?
 - a. Puerperal sepsis was identified as a risk factor in labor and delivery.
 - b. Forceps were developed to facilitate difficult births.
 - c. The importance of early parental-infant contact was identified.
 - d. Technologic developments became available to physicians.

ANS: D

Technologic developments were available to physicians, not lay midwives. So in-hospital births increased in order to take advantage of these advancements. Puerperal sepsis has been a known problem for generations. In the late 19th century, Semmelweis discovered how it could be prevented with improved hygienic practices. The development of forceps is an example of a technology advance made in the early 20th century but is not the only reason birthplaces moved. Unlike home births, early hospital births hindered bonding between parents and their infants.

 - a. demands by physicians for family involvement in childbirth.
 - b. the Sheppard-Towner Act of 1921.
 - c. parental requests that infants be allowed to remain with them rather than in a nursery.
 - d. changes in pharmacologic management of labor.

ANS: C

As research began to identify the benefits of early extended parent-infant contact, parents began to insist that the infant remain with them. This gradually developed into the practice of rooming-in and finally to family-centered maternity care. Family-centered care was a request by parents, not physicians. The Sheppard-Towner Act of 1921 provided funds for state-managed programs for mothers and children. The changes in pharmacologic management of labor were not a factor in family-centered maternity care.
