

Activity 1: 10/10/2025

Reading: read the first two sections on genetic variation in peromyscus completely (both of the following questions) and then read the third section on understanding of the concepts discussed in the lecture.

1. Match each of the following changes in chromosome structure to its definition:

☒ A. Deletion

☐ B. Duplication

☐ C. Inversion

☐ D. Translocation

1a. a section of a chromosome has been lost

1b. a piece of a chromosome is deleted

1c. a segment of one chromosome has moved to a different chromosome (different, same chromosome, chromosome)

1d. a section of a chromosome appears to be or more times as usual

2. How many genetically different gametes can be produced from a diploid cell with four chromosomes pairs? Explain your answer.

2a. Since the number of genetically distinct gametes that can be produced is equal to 2^n , where n is total number chromosomes pairs, a diploid cell with four chromosomes pairs can produce gametes of 2^4 or 16 genetically distinct gametes.

3. Although you will learn a mechanism of mutation from your reading, you recognize that some traits are the less independent assortment. (for example, hair colour and eye colour). Why may some traits be inherited together?

3a. Traits that are inherited together are those on the same chromosome. (Example: blue hair, red glasses, prominent nose, and a curly ponytail). You only have one pair of chromosomes chromosomes (blue hair will be found with curly hair and red glasses in the gametes, or with blonde hair, with the blonde hair).

4. Describe the alignment of chromosomes during prophase I, write the sequence:

4a. Prophase I begins with a long and homologous chromosomes align together, called synapsis. This is a synapsis because it allows the crossing over to occur and results in the genetic recombination.

5. How does recombination lead to chromosomal polymorphism? Describe two types of genetic mutations that can result from recombination.
