The Use of Historical Data in Natural Hazard Assessments Thomas Glade, Paola Albini, Félix Francés, 2013-03-09 Natural hazards such as earthquakes landslides floods volcanic eruptions tsunamis and hurricanes cause environmental economic as well as sociological problems worldwide In recent years greater availability of information and sensational media reports of natural hazard occurrence and in particular in terms of property damage or loss of life caused by these hazards resulted in an increase of hazard awareness at a societal level This increase in public awareness has often been misconstrued as an indication that natural hazards have been occurring more frequently with higher magnitudes in recent years decades thus causing more damage than in the past It is still under debate however to which extent recent increases in damage can be related to changing frequencies of natural processes or whether catastrophic events occur at similar rates as they always had If the latter is the case the reason for a greater damage can be related to dramatic population growth over the last century with a substantial augmentation of population density in some regions Indeed the implications are more severe in underdeveloped and developing countries where urbanisation has increasingly occurred in hazard prone areas such as coastal zones alluvial river plains and steep slopes thus causing an increase in the exposure to natural hazards Some groups of society in wealthy countries accept higher risks in order to live directly on top of a cliff or on a steep slope to enjoy panoramic views of the landscape
