Individual Differences in Language Ability and Language Behavior Charles J Fillmore, Daniel Kempler, William S-Y. Wang, 2014-05-10 Individual Differences in Language Ability and Language Behavior is a collection of papers that discusses differences at the center of the study of language specifically on the various dimensions of linguistic ability and behavior along which individuals can differ from each other. Papers also review the development of techniques that measure these dimensions in relation to biological, psychological, and cultural parameters. Some papers review individual differences in language study in terms of different perspectives: that of a psychometrician, that of an individualistic advantage point, and that of a psycholinguistic. Other papers discuss how each individual accesses, uses, and judges his language through fluency, biases, spatial principles, or a linguistic phonetic mode. Several papers examine individual differences in language acquisition, such as profile analysis, strategies in acquisition of sounds, second language learning, and duplication of adult language system. A group of papers addresses the biological aspects of language variation. These biological aspects include selective disorders of syntax, agrammatism, selective disorders of lexical retrieval, anomia, and cerebral lateralization effects in language processing. Certain papers explain individual differences in languages using sociolinguistic analysis. The collection is well suited for linguists, ethnologists, psychologists, and researchers whose works involve linguistics, learning, communications, and syntax.
