Prosodic and Phonological Ability in Children with Developmental Language Disorder and Children with Hearing Impairment Simon Sundström, 2018-05-15 Many children with developmental language disorder DLD exhibit difficulties with phonology i e the sounds of language Children with any degree of hearing impairment HI are at an increased risk of problems with spoken language including phonology The cause of these difficulties is unknown in children with DLD and is often assumed to result from reduced hearing acuity in children with HI Variability in terms of language outcomes is large in both groups and determining if a child s language ability is within normal limits or not is problematic A task that has proven useful in differentiating typical from atypical language development is nonword repetition in which the child listens to a word form without meaning and repeats it back immediately Performance in nonword repetition tasks is a potential indicator of language ability in both children with DLD and children with HI However it has not been established exactly what the task measures In the present thesis the ability to repeat prosodic and segmental features of real words and nonwords was investigated in Swedish speaking four to six year old children with DLD and HI as well as in children with normal hearing and typical language development TLD papers I II and III Further relations of word and nonword repetition ability to language and hearing were explored papers II and III along with comparisons of phonological and grammatical production between the groups paper IV The findings indicated that the prosodic features stress and tonal word accent affect repetition performance in children with DLD HI and TLD In general the children with DLD and HI achieved lower results than the children with TLD on repetition of segments consonants and vowels and prosodic features but tonal word accent was repeated with relatively high accuracy Tonal word accent 1 was more accurately repeated than tonal word accent 2 by the DLD and HI children The children with TLD repeated tonal word accent with few errors but segments in nonwords with tonal word accent 2 were easier to repeat than segments in nonwords with tonal word accent 1 The results further revealed that the ability of children with DLD to repeat stress in real words is related to expressive grammar but repetition of prosodic features does not reflect general language knowledge In contrast repetition of both segmental and prosodic nonword features may be indicative of receptive vocabulary phonological production during naming of familiar words and expressive grammar in children with HI Repetition performance might be related to the degree of HI before cochlear implantation or fitting of hearing aids Children with DLD and children with HI demonstrate similar strengths and weaknesses in phonological and grammatical production despite the fact that they develop language under different conditions with and without normal hearing Tonal word accent use and syntax are relatively unimpaired in DLD and HI children This thesis highlights prosodic and phonological strengths and weaknesses in children who have or are at risk of deficits in language and communication abilities It also supports word and nonword repetition as potential predictors of some aspects of language ability in children with DLD and HI Further it emphasizes the importance of taking prosody into account when constructing or interpreting results from repetition tasks Future research aiming to investigate the relationship between prosody in repetition and language cognition and hearing should use longitudinal study designs and include younger children Studies comparing prosodic and phonological ability in children with DLD and children with HI should employ both quantitative and qualitative analyses

Basic Concepts of Clinical Electrophysiology in Audiology John D. Durrant, Cynthia G. Fowler, John A. Ferraro, Suzanne C. Purdy, 2022-01-07 Basic Concepts of Clinical Electrophysiology in Audiology is a revolutionary textbook combining the research and expertise of both distinguished experts and up and coming voices in the field By taking a multidisciplinary approach to the subject the editors of this graduate level text break down all aspects of electrophysiology to make it accessible to audiology students In addition to defining the basics of the tools of the trade and their routine uses the authors also provide ample presentations of new approaches currently undergoing continuing research and development The goal of this textbook is to give developing audiologists a broad and solid basis of understanding of the methods in common or promising practice Throughout the text individual chapters are divided into episodes each examining a facet of the overarching chapter s topic With different experts handling each episode readers are exposed to outstanding professionals in the field This text singularly stitches together the chapters and their episodes to build from foundational concepts to more complex issues that clinicians are likely to face on their road to full clinical competency As collections of episodes the writers and editors thus endeavor to present a series of stories that build throughout the book in turn allowing readers to build a broader interest in the subject Key Features Heads Up sections in each chapter introduce more advanced content to expose readers to what lies beyond the basic level and further enhance the main chapter content and entertainment value Take home messages at the end of each chapter serve to focus the reader s attention encourage review and discourage superficial learning by just reading the abstract More than 450 innovative illustrations use combinations of panels insets and or gray tone to facilitate reader understanding optimize portrayal of data and unify concepts across chapters Numerous case studies and references to practical clinical issues and results are included throughout the book Keywords are highlighted in text to improve both attention and retention of critical terms and ease of returning to review them
