EXPERIMENT 1: THE EFFECT OF TEMPERATURE ON THE RATE OF A CHEMICAL REACTION

The purpose of this experiment is to determine the effect of temperature on the rate of a chemical reaction. The reaction studied is the reaction between hydrogen peroxide and potassium iodide. The rate of reaction is measured by the time taken for a certain amount of iodine to be produced. The experiment is carried out at different temperatures and the results are plotted on a graph of time against temperature. The graph shows that the rate of reaction increases with temperature.

The reaction between hydrogen peroxide and potassium iodide is an exothermic reaction. The rate of reaction is affected by temperature. The higher the temperature, the faster the reaction. This is because the molecules have more energy and are more likely to collide and react. The experiment is carried out at different temperatures and the results are plotted on a graph of time against temperature. The graph shows that the rate of reaction increases with temperature.
