- are made up of cells
- use molecules obtained from the environment to synthesize new biological molecules
- extract energy from the environment and use it to do work
- regulate their internal environments

What is taxonomy and how are scientific names of organisms given? How are they written?

In biology, taxonomy is the scientific study of naming and classifying groups of living organisms based on shared characteristics. It's called binomial nomenclature, which means that scientists give two Latinized names to the organisms. The first part identifies the species' genus, a group of species that share a recent name ancestor, the second part identifies the particular species within the genus. For example, Homo sapiens.

In scientific writing, the genus's first letter is written in capital letter, the first letter of species is written in lower case.

What is a phylogenetic tree and what types of data can be used to construct them?

A phylogenetic portrays the evolutionary histories of the different groups of organisms, evidence from fossils, structures, metabolic processes, behaviour, and molecular analysis of genomes
