All About Historical Fiction
An Introduction to Historical Fiction

Story Elements
Characters
The characters are the people or animals in a story. In historical fiction, the characters are often made up but react to real events.

Why do authors write historical fiction?

- To show history, authors often write historical fiction to entertain the reader.
- Authors may want the reader to see history from a different perspective.
- The author may want to educate the reader about a certain event or time period in history.

Story Elements
Problem & Solution
The characters in historical fiction have a problem and solution that make sense for the time period.

The Definition
These stories capture real details of a historical period but include fictional (imaginary) characters and events.

Story Elements
Setting
In historical fiction, the setting should be:
• A specific time in history
• A specific place in history
• A specific event in history

QUICK CHECK
True or False?
In historical fiction stories, authors capture events of the past and fictional time periods accurately.

Fiction stories are made up by an author. It is a story the author imagined and created.

WRITING HISTORICAL FICTION
All great stories take a lot of thought and planning to create.

Story Elements
Plot
The plot in a historical fiction story includes historical events with fictional events of the time period.

Multiple Choice
Which of these would not be a good example of historical fiction?
A. An introduction to history
B. The invention of America
C. All about dinosaurs
