

Task

Developing and structuring an argument can often be the most difficult part of writing the opinion article.

Let's return to each of the examples from earlier in the lesson.

Begin to structure an argument leading from each of the discourses. Don't worry if you don't necessarily agree with all parts of the discourse at this stage. For each of the examples, work through the following steps:

1. Firstly, what language topic or theme is the example addressing? (E.g. For example 1, World Englishes and Language Change)
2. Underneath, note down your immediate response to the argument. Do you agree with it? Do you disagree? Why? (E.g. For example 1, English is certainly a dominant force in the world but other world languages are just as influential)
3. Which words hint at some form of metaphor? It is useful to establish your own metaphor, extended or not, early on, so consider any other words which you could also use to further this metaphor. (E.g. 'killing' is a forceful verb which implies the metaphor of conflict – we could also use 'murder', 'hunt', 'eradicate', etc)
4. How might we argue in support of the view? (E.g. English as a lingua franca would certainly imply English's continued dominance compared with the prevalence of other languages which are taught throughout the world)
5. How might we argue against or contrast this view? (E.g. English is not eradicating other languages but is instead adapting all the time, becoming a new form of 'Global English')

1. Is English killing other languages?
