Part Three

1. Research Scenario: An investigator in child-development research is studying whether parenting styles have an effect on second-grade students' behavior at school. She interviews 29 volunteer families from her water class and separates them into three groups of parenting styles: authoritative ($n = 8$), authoritarian ($n = 8$), and permissive ($n = 7$). These mothers fill out a behavior inventory for each of the 29 children, and the investigator collects and scores them. The scores are contained in the table below. The scores can range from 0–20, and a higher score indicates more behavior problems. Conduct a one-way ANOVA to determine the effect of parenting styles on behavior inventory scores.

This stage will be the same as the ones you have been practicing in Part One of the assignment—the only difference is that you are now responsible for creating the data file as well. Remember to name and define your variables under the "Variable View," then return to the "Data View" to enter the data.
