

From DNA to Protein Synthesis

Pre-Lab Questions

What are the steps involved in transcription & translation?

Transcription

Transcription is the process by which the information in a gene is used to synthesize a complementary RNA strand. This step is carried out by RNA polymerase, which binds to the promoter region of the DNA and synthesizes a complementary RNA strand. The RNA strand is then processed into a messenger RNA (mRNA) molecule.

The mRNA molecule is then translated into a protein by the ribosome. The ribosome reads the mRNA sequence and synthesizes a protein chain. The protein chain is then folded into its functional shape.

Transcription

How does it happen?

Pre-Lab Questions

1. Explain the role of RNA polymerase and the promoter region.

RNA polymerase is the enzyme that synthesizes RNA from a DNA template. The promoter region is a specific sequence of DNA that is recognized by RNA polymerase and other transcription factors. The promoter region is located upstream of the gene and is essential for the initiation of transcription.

2. Describe the Central Dogma of Molecular Biology. What are the exceptions to this rule?

The Central Dogma of Molecular Biology states that information flows from DNA to RNA to protein. However, there are exceptions to this rule. For example, some viruses can reverse transcribe their RNA into DNA. Additionally, some proteins can be translated directly from DNA in certain organelles like mitochondria.

3. Explain the role of the start codon and the stop codon in translation.

The start codon (AUG) codes for the amino acid methionine and is the first codon of a protein-coding sequence. The stop codons (UAG, UGA, UGG) do not code for any amino acids and signal the end of translation.
