Computing Attitude and Affect in Text: Theory and Applications James G. Shanahan, Yan Qu, Janyce Wiebe, 2006-01-17

Human Language Technology HLT and Natural Language Processing NLP systems have typically focused on the factual aspect of content analysis Other aspects including pragmatics opinion and style have received much less attention However to achieve an adequate understanding of a text these aspects cannot be ignored The chapters in this book address the aspect of subjective opinion which includes identifying different points of view identifying different emotive dimensions and classifying text by opinion Various conceptual models and computational methods are presented The models explored in this book include the following distinguishing attitudes from simple factual assertions distinguishing between the author's reports from reports of other people's opinions and distinguishing between explicitly and implicitly stated attitudes In addition many applications are described that promise to benefit from the ability to understand attitudes and affect including indexing and retrieval of documents by opinion automatic question answering about opinions analysis of sentiment in the media and in discussion groups about consumer products political issues etc brand and reputation management discovering and predicting consumer and voting trends analyzing client discourse in therapy and counseling determining relations between scientific texts by finding reasons for citations generating more appropriate texts and making agents more believable and creating writers aids The studies reported here are carried out on different languages such as English French Japanese and Portuguese Difficult challenges remain however It can be argued that analyzing attitude and affect in text is an NLP complete problem
