

Supply index R34

The supply relay acts as the main switch for the HEC system. The HEC control unit is supplied with voltage by the supply relay. The control unit controls the relay itself and this gives it control over the system. If the relay releases, the engine will stop.

When the starter voltage is turned on using the starter key, voltage is applied to the control unit pin-47 with the battery voltage of +24 V. The control unit then routes the pin 46, the supply relay is activated and the control unit is supplied with +24 V on pins 17 and 16.

Location of supply relay in central electric unit
The central electric unit is the same in both tracks and buses.

Location of supply relay and control electric unit, track. The location of the control electric unit varies in design.
