

Complementary Feeding

By the time your little one is six months old, it is time to get him started on complementary foods. Breastfeeding alone beyond 6 months does not provide sufficient nutrition for growth.

To avoid choking, it is crucial that your child is developmentally ready in terms of his oral-motor skills (mouth patterns) as well as hand and body control. These determine when to introduce solids, different textures, and how the feeding is done.

The table below illustrates the recommended textures and examples of food for estimated ages and the necessary oral-motor skills to handle a given texture.

When Child can:	Estimated Age	Texture	Description	Serve:
