Classroom Connections

Energy cannot be created or destroyed. However, it can transform from one form into another. In a closed system, energy can be transformed from one form to another, but the total amount of energy remains the same. For example, a ball rolling down a ramp transforms potential energy into kinetic energy. The total energy (potential + kinetic) remains constant.

Energy can be transferred from one object to another through contact, or through waves, light, or sound.

Energy can change from one form to another. For example, a battery can transform chemical energy into electrical energy. The total energy (chemical + electrical) remains constant.

Here are some other examples of energy transformations:

input	output	output
electrical energy	light energy	heat energy
mechanical energy	sound energy	heat energy
