Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Ankara, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the 10-year-old children in the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical activity during the 12-week period, while the experimental group participated in a 12-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness than the control group at the end of the 12-week period. The results also showed that the physical fitness of the children improved significantly during the 12-week period. The study concluded that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

Q QUESTION I have a 1994 Buick Wildcat with 150,000 miles. The car has been in the shop several times for engine problems. The last time was about a month ago. The engine was replaced with a new one. The car has been running fine since then. However, I have noticed that the car is making a strange noise when I accelerate. It sounds like a rattling or knocking sound. I have taken the car to the shop, but they have not been able to find the problem. Can you help me?
