Red Hot City Dan Immergluck, 2022-10-11 An incisive examination of how growth at all costs planning and policy have exacerbated inequality and racial division in Atlanta Atlanta the capital of the American South is at the red hot core of expansion inequality and political relevance In recent decades central Atlanta has experienced heavily racialized gentrification while the suburbs have become more diverse with many affluent suburbs trying to push back against this diversity Exploring the city's past and future Red Hot City tracks these racial and economic shifts and the politics and policies that produced them Dan Immergluck documents the trends that are inverting Atlanta's late twentieth century poor in the core urban model New emphasis on capital driven growth has excluded low income people and families of color from the city's center pushing them to distant suburbs far from mass transit large public hospitals and other essential services Revealing critical lessons for leaders activists and residents in cities around the world Immergluck considers how planners and policymakers can reverse recent trends to create more socially equitable cities

Advances in Cryptology G.R. Blakely, D. Chaum, 2003-05-16 Recently there has been a lot of interest in provably good pseudo random number generators [1, 4, 14, 31] These cryptographically secure generators are good in the sense that they pass all probabilistic polynomial time statistical tests However despite these nice properties the secure generators known so far suffer from the handicap of being inefficient the most efficient of these take n^2 steps one modular multiplication n being the length of the seed to generate one bit Pseudo random number generators that are currently used in practice output n bits per multiplication n^2 steps An important open problem was to output even two bits on each multiplication in a cryptographically secure way This problem was stated by Blum Blum Shub [3] in the context of their $z^2 \bmod N$ generator They further ask how many bits can be output per multiplication maintaining cryptographic security In this paper we state a simple condition the XOR Condition and show that any generator satisfying this condition can output $\log n$ bits on each multiplication We show that the XOR Condition is satisfied by the \log least significant bits of the $z^2 \bmod N$ generator The security of the $z^2 \bmod N$ generator was based on Quadratic Residuosity [3] This generator is an example of a Trapdoor Generator [13] and its trapdoor properties have been used in protocol design We strengthen the security of this generator by proving it as hard as factoring
