Federspiel,Gilberto Montibeller,Matthias Seifert,2024-05-30 This book lays out a foundation and taxonomy for Behavioral Decision Analysis featuring representative work across various domains Traditional research in the domain of Decision Analysis has focused on the design and application of logically consistent tools to support decision makers during the process of structuring problem complexity modeling uncertainty generating predictions eliciting preferences and ultimately making better decisions Two commonly held assumptions are that the decision maker s cognitive belief system is fully accessible and that this system can be understood and formalized by trained analysts However in past years an active line of research has emerged studying instances in which such assumptions may not hold This book unites this community under the common theme of Behavioral Decision Analysis The taxonomy used in this book categorizes research based on task focus prediction or decision and behavioral level individual or group Two theoretical lenses that lie at the interface between 1 normative and descriptive research and 2 normative and prescriptive research are introduced The book then proceeds to highlight representative works across the two lenses focused on individual and group level decision making Featuring various methodologies and applications the book serves as a reference for researchers students and professionals across different disciplines with a common interest in Behavioral Decision Analysis The Routines of Decision Making Tilmann Betsch,Susanne

The Psychology of Economic Decisions Isabelle Brocas, Juan D. Carrillo, 2003 Psychologists and economists often ask similar questions about human behaviour This volume brings together contributions from leaders in both disciplines The editorial introduction discusses methodological differences between the two which have until now limited the development of mutually beneficial lines of research Psychologists have objected to what they see as an excessive formalism in economic modelling and an unrealistic degree of sophistication in the behaviour of individuals while economists criticize the absence of a general psychological framework into which most results can be fitted and the lack of welfare implications in their theories The editors encourage scholars to exploit the strengths of each discipline the ability of psychologists to understand the feelings and motivation of individuals and the experience of economists to develop normative frameworks The editors then highlight the links between the contributions by grouping them according to central themes in the study of rationality and well being

- 1 The causes and consequences of irrational behaviour
- 2 The role of anticipatory feelings and imperfect self knowledge on decision making
- 3 The way in which memory of past events and cost of thinking affect current decisions
- 4 The interaction between anticipated and remembered utility and its effects on the welfare of individuals
- 5 Experimental practice
