Public Outcry Leads Va. To Continue K-3 SAT History Testing

By Lawrence E. Brown

Virginia's decision to continue testing students in kindergarten through third grade on the Standards of English and Mathematics Assessment Test (SEAT) has been met with a wave of public outcry. Parents and educators across the state are questioning the necessity of such early testing, arguing that it places undue pressure on young children and does not accurately measure their learning. The state's Department of Education has responded by stating that the test is a valuable tool for identifying students who may need additional support. However, the controversy continues as more voices are heard.
