The inner ear is where the sound waves are converted into electrical signals that the brain can understand. The inner ear is made up of the cochlea and the vestibular system. The cochlea is a spiral-shaped structure that contains the cochlear duct, which is filled with a fluid called perilymph. The vestibular system is made up of the utricle and saccule, which are filled with a fluid called endolymph. The utricle and saccule are responsible for detecting linear acceleration and head position. The vestibular system also contains three semicircular canals, which are responsible for detecting rotational acceleration.

The ear is a complex organ that is responsible for hearing and balance. It is made up of three parts: the external ear, the middle ear, and the inner ear. The external ear is the part of the ear that is visible to the eye. It is made up of the pinna and the ear canal. The middle ear is the part of the ear that is located behind the eardrum. It contains three small bones called the ossicles. The inner ear is the part of the ear that is located inside the skull. It contains the cochlea and the vestibular system.
