The heart of the book guides the reader through the general structure of a fully developed cost accounting system following the German and Central European standard. It starts with cost type accounting, moves on to cost center accounting and finally deals with cost unit accounting, assigning cost to goods and services offered in the market. The remaining parts of the book deal with decision making and how management and cost accounting data can support managers in this task. A comparison of absorption costing and variable costing introduces the reader to management decisions such as product portfolio and outsourcing decisions. Game Theory in Management Accounting David Mueller,Ralf Trost,2017-09-21 This book demonstrates what kind of problems originating in a management accounting setting may be solved with game theoretic models Game theory has experienced growing interest and numerous applications in the field of management accounting The main focus traditionally has been on the field of non cooperative behaviour but the area of cooperative game theory has developed rapidly and has received increasing attention Intensive research in combination with the changing culture of publishing has produced a nearly unmanageable number of publications in the areas concerned. Therefore one main purpose of this volume is providing an intensive analysis of the intersection of these areas. In addition, the book strengthens the relationship between the theory and the practical applications and it illustrates the two-sided relationship between game theory and management accounting. New game-theoretic models offer new fields of applications and these applications raise new questions for the theory.

Improving an existing CIS by examining customer decisions, development, and planning to increase the effectiveness for ISC and ISM Peter Sauer, 2002-08-30

Inhaltsangabe Abstract More and more companies apply electronic information systems in all their business areas. In the past, many of these systems pertained to one specific user group. However, due to high efforts and investments for maintaining these information flows, companies tend to increase the amount of attracted user groups. Thereby, the users must deal with more and more information every day. In addition, they must select the relevant information which serves as a basis for their decisions on their own. This procedure and the included irrelevant information generate high efforts due to rework requirements. Therefore, users reject more and more information. All these conditions combined with a two-user-group-oriented customer information system require output adjustments to the user-specific needs. Consequently, it is necessary to identify the users, their needs, and the potential effectiveness of specific information provided by a specific system. This thesis refers to theoretical analysis models for generating an optimal concept. Thereby, it considers methods analyzing the original information system, aims user groups, their needs, and the way the provided information flow can meet all these requests. These considerations represent actual conditions of Varta Gerätebatterien GmbH. Afterwards, this research compares the optimal with the actual situation in order to deduct appropriate improvement steps. Finally, this thesis suggests possible integrations and constitutes the related advantages and disadvantages based on cost accounting and information management theory. The information flow analysis demonstrates the importance of finding appropriate methods and the key role of defining all users. Moreover, it emphasizes the significance of adjusting this flow to user needs in regular intervals due to the rapidly changing environment The analysis of the information preparation and output indicates that communication plays a key role in exchanging information The analysis of the optimal and the actual information system display several gaps which VARTA should close The actual situation analysis includes company conditions Therefore it is valid for practical implementation These gaps pertain to the improvement procedure as well as to completely new integration issues
