

MASTER GLIDER

This is a very stable glider that can hit buildings and trees and continue flying, it can fly in wind, and it also can fly high and for a long time. This is my favorite paper airplane.

Start with an 8.5 x 11 inch sheet of paper. Cut off the bottom two inches.

Fold in half lengthwise and open back up.

Fold the top down 1.5 inches.

Fold the top down.

Fold the top corners down to the center and fold the airplane in half towards you. Crease this vertical fold well.

Fold the wings down at an angle of about 12 degrees.

Tape wings together.

Bend elevators up slightly for better flight.

For best flight: Bend the leading edges of the wings down at a slight angle, fold the back half of the wingtips up, and make sure you add just a little up elevator. The wings should be perpendicular to the fuselage. When throwing the plane, hold it in the center of the fuselage and throw it at an angle upwards. (However, even if you throw it fairly level, it will refuse to make a short flight!)

*The first time I made this airplane, I used a paper that was 4.7 in. x 4.1 in. For this size, a piece of tape is not necessary in the construction of the plane.
