As these issues are resolved, we will have gained valuable insights into the nature of the various forms of violence. We will also have to the credit of the police, other agencies and the public. It is the hope of the committee that the report will be published and that the public will be able to see the progress of the work. It is the hope of the committee that the public will be able to see the progress of the work.

These individuals appear to not have experienced the same type of experience as the people in the other studies who were asked to consider a possible, but not a sure, loss. In the latter study, the willingness to forgo future income was only after reflection about the worst case. Perhaps a more realistic loss would be the capital losses that appear to be exhibited by individuals who have been asked about the worst case in a monetary game, as well as the loss of income-generating assets. There are currently no experiments that have tried to combine the two. There does not appear to have been a direct point of asking if the large income, large money loss was experienced through a similar strategy as that used in the earlier, no money loss, scenario. It would be good to know that. But that is something that needs to be done in the future with a number of studies, as a number of people, as described in the previous section, may have been asked to consider a possible, but not a sure, loss.

Maya Civilisation

c. 2000 BCE to AD 900

The Maya people still exist today and have survived numerous attempts to wipe them out over the course of their history. This unit refers mainly to the classical Maya period, which stretches from approx. 250-950 AD. During this time society became more organised around urban areas and society became more organised. Advances were made in astronomy, maths and language, as well as architecture and agriculture. Links were made with other peoples across the continent. Scholars disagree over why the classical period came to an end, although it has been hypothesised that it was caused by a widespread drought, which ended the growth of society and impoverished the population.

Maya settlements appear to not have been planned, but a general centre point was the temple. It is thought that the stepped temples were built both as a statement of grandeur and as a route to the heavens above. This is something the Maya have in common with many other civilisations across the ancient world. Rumours of human sacrifice have seeped into popular culture, but appear to be overblown. Each settlement also had wide-open plazas which served as a meeting point, as well as a ball court where games were held. Cities were generally not organised in an identical way, but had lots of common features. There does not appear to have been a central point of authority in the Maya empire, rather society was organised through a number of rulers at local level. This is perhaps the reason the Mayans endured, without a central powerbase that could be decapitated, agreements had to be made with a number of rulers, in a way this is similar to the Indian, or even European, city-states.
