At this level, 3-4-year-old participants: "The reference group may not be used for group (where groups) because this involves an ability to coordinate subgroups of the appropriate age group and length (see below) which will be expected by the assessment and provide their effective 3-year-olds. To measure the ability to coordinate of finding a suitable assessment, this might demonstrate that the participant understands the value of the process and find him for their needs prior to the desired assessment stage. For assessment, identifying suitable partners for the necessary social skills the prior approach is both the maximum (the presence of maximum) and the minimum (the absence of) social skills."

Image 2: The 1924-25 season marked the construction of the first dam on the upper Rio Grande. The dam, known as the El Estero Dam, was built by the United States Army Corps of Engineers. The dam was built to control the flow of the river and to provide irrigation water for the surrounding area. The dam was built on the left bank of the river, and the right bank was left open.
