Making Connections
A Laboratory Activity for the Living Environment

Discovering Connections

As they make observations, scientists are always looking for patterns in the natural world. For instance, researchers have observed that pregnant women who smoke cigarettes have a higher incidence of low-birthweight babies and that people with high-fat diets have a greater risk of developing heart disease. Many similar medical discoveries are a result of the patterns that can be observed when studying people and their lifestyles.

Discovering and explaining connections is one of the basic methods by which our knowledge of the world advances. It is what science is all about! Sometimes the connections are not what we expect or would predict, and sometimes we may have a hard time explaining the connections. Nevertheless, that is how science makes progress.

In this part of the laboratory activity, you will make a few observations about yourself and your classmates; then you will look for patterns or connections.

Safety

Safety is important during any laboratory activity, be sure you are careful and behave responsibly.

Another concern is health. If you have health reasons for not performing the exercises called for in this activity, tell your teacher so that other arrangements can be made for you to successfully complete the investigation. If you are excused from gym class for medical reasons, for example, or if you have asthma, tell your teacher about it before beginning the laboratory activity.

Jackson, 2018-08-29 Some great teachers are born but most are self made And the way to make yourself a great teacher is to learn to think and act like one In this updated second edition of the best selling Never Work Harder Than Your Students Robyn R Jackson reaffirms that every teacher can become a master teacher The secret is not a specific strategy or technique nor it is endless hours of prep time It s developing a master teacher mindset rigorously applying seven principles to your teaching until they become your automatic response Start where you students are Know where your students are going Expect to get your students there Support your students along the way Use feedback to help you and your students get better Focus on quality rather than quantity Never work harder than your students In her conversational and candid style Jackson explains the mastery principles and how to start using them to guide planning instruction assessment and classroom management She answers questions shares stories from her own practice and work with other teachers and provides all new empowering advice on navigating external evaluation There s even a self assessment to help you identify your current levels of mastery and take control of your own practice Teaching is hard work and great teaching means doing the right kind of hard work the kind that pays off Join tens of thousands of teachers around the world who have embarked on their journeys toward mastery Discover for yourself the difference that Jackson s principles will make in your classroom and for your students Intellectual Creativity in First-Year Composition Classes Heidi Wall

Burns,Michael MacBride,2016-10-12 Today s first year composition classrooms are largely reflective of the writing pedagogy that has been used for the last 200 years Unfortunately this methodology does not meet the research or writing needs of today s college and university students Burns and MacBride were determined to make their first year composition courses more relevant to their students and sought a way to revolutionize their syllabus to do so Building on the work of Tom Romono Nancy Mack Camille Allen Sirpa Grierson Melinda Putz and others Burns and MacBride set out to determine if a multigenre research project could better teach their students research writing and critical thinking skills than a traditional research based essay The findings of their semester long study indicated that not only does a MGRP teach these skills but it far surpasses a traditional essay in teaching engagement intellectual creativity and transferable writing skills Burns and MacBride demonstrate two different ways to integrate a multigenre research project into the college composition classroom
