Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, 3-day-per-week, 100-min-per-session, low-impact aerobically demanding dance program on the health-related fitness of 10-year-old girls. The program was designed to be fun and to include a variety of dance styles. The program was evaluated using a pretest and a posttest. The pretest was conducted at the beginning of the program, and the posttest was conducted at the end of the program. The results of the pretest and posttest showed that the girls who participated in the program had significantly higher levels of health-related fitness than the girls who did not participate in the program. The girls who participated in the program had significantly higher levels of cardiovascular fitness, muscular fitness, and flexibility than the girls who did not participate in the program. The girls who participated in the program also had significantly higher levels of body composition than the girls who did not participate in the program. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, 3-day-per-week, 100-min-per-session, low-impact aerobically demanding dance program can improve the health-related fitness of 10-year-old girls.
