

fourth stage changes a man to a devotee of God. At this point, he is free from all kinds of material burden like home, relations, responsibilities and material pleasures.

The primary stage Brahmacharya is generally considered as the period of formal education in which students earn both spiritual and practical education from a guru. This is the period which requires desirable qualities and manners. At this time, a student is known as 'brahmachari' who prepares for future profession and for the prosperity of his family. The second stage is 'Grihastha' which promotes the qualities of a householder. In this stage, a man begins to lead married life. Here his responsibility is vested on looking after his family. The third stage 'Vanaprastha' is the most crucial stage in a man's life. Here, a man finds the real purpose of his life and he should spend most of his time in praying and fasting. The above mentioned stages in human life provide ethical qualities for people through practicing variety of rituals. In his first stage, a Hindu should keep respect and devotion towards his guru. In addition, this period emphasizes learning, practical knowledge, skills and habits. Marriage, religious doctrines meditations provide better physical as well spiritual health. The life of a 'Sannyasi' requires maximum attention for meditation and religious activities. In this stage, one should control his feelings and follow heavenly values in his life.

The caste system in Hindu religion paved the way for social polarizations based on duties and this promotes controversies in Indian society. Historians have stated that four specific castes (or jatis) are described in the Dharmasutras and are based on four groups of social occupations: Priests (brahmins), Warriors/Rulers (kshatriyas), Artisans (vaishyas), and Servants (shudras) (Fieser, 2001). First three classes were enjoyed religious practices and worships. Lower class people in the fourth class faced severe segregation and refusal from social and religious life. Their life is comprised with menial jobs. Caste system in Hindu
