Wilson,1988-03-01 Wilson traces four major themes in the thought of Paine and Cobbett the relationship between British radical ideas and American revolutionary ideology the eighteenth century revolution in rhetorical theory the effect of the American and French Revolutions on British popular radicalism and the American attempt to turn the United States into a new empire of liberty He challenges the view that Paine created a new literary style for a new audience of artisans and labourers arguing instead that this style was part of a broader revolution in rhetoric and discusses the interconnections between Paine s English and American careers Wilson shows that the tension between the ideal and the real is central to understanding Cobbett He analyzes Cobbett s American experiences and examines the role of Paine s writings and the United States in Cobbett s subsequent career as a radical in England The epilogue returns to the differences and similarities in Paine s and Cobbett s careers examines their strategies for change and discusses their ambiguous legacies to the nineteenth and twentieth centuries Providence and the Invention of the United States, 1607-1876 Nicholas Guyatt,2007-07-23 Nicholas Guyatt offers a completely new understanding of a central question in American history how did Americans come to think that God favored the United States above other nations Tracing the story of American providentialism this book uncovers the British roots of American religious nationalism before the American Revolution and the extraordinary struggles of white Americans to reconcile their ideas of national mission with the racial diversity of the early republic Making sense of previously diffuse debates on manifest destiny millenarianism and American mission Providence and the Invention of the United States explains the origins and development of the idea that God has a special plan for America This conviction supplied the United States with a powerful sense of national purpose but it also prevented Americans from clearly understanding events and people that could not easily be fitted into the providential scheme
