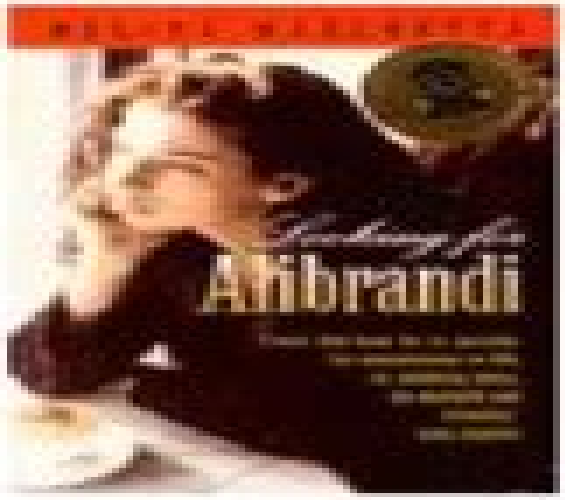
Looking for Alibrandi

by Melina Marchetta



Plot

"It all was starting. Now for my life. To the first word that I'd ever typed. Not as an illustration and not as an instance and not as an example. It was for the moment. Of eternity and for ever."

Josephine Alibrandi is seventeen, and as the novel gets underway she's in love. Trouble is that the object of her affections is decidedly unsuitable, and she's also trying to balance her desire to be with him against her responsibility to her family and friends.

Complicating matters is the fact that Josie's mother, Christina, is keeping a secret from her daughter, and Josie's grandmother, Nonna, is not making things any easier.

Literary Devices - Narrative devices are the methods, tools and techniques that writers use to tell their stories. Writers choose which to use depending on the type of story they want to tell. Below are some of the devices Marchetta uses in Looking for Alibrandi.

Allusion to events affecting other characters in the book.
