Analogical classification in formal grammar Matías Guzmán Naranjo,2019 The organization of the lexicon and especially the relations between groups of lexemes is a strongly debated topic in linguistics Some authors have insisted on the lack of any structure of the lexicon In this vein Di Sciullo Skousen 1989 Eddington 1996 This approach often called analogical has developed highly accurate computational and non computational models that can predict the classes to which lexemes belong Like the organization of lexemes in type hierarchies analogical relations between items help speakers to make sense of intricate systems and reduce apparent complexity K pcke Zubin 1984 Despite this core commonality and despite the fact that most linguists seem to agree that analogy plays an important role in language there has been remarkably little work on bringing together these two approaches Formal grammar traditions have been very successful in capturing grammatical behaviour but in the process have downplayed the role analogy plays in linguistics Anderson 2015 In this work I aim to change this state of affairs First by providing an explicit formalization of how analogy interacts with grammar and second by showing that analogical effects and relations closely mirror the structures in the lexicon I will show that both formal grammar approaches and usage based analogical models capture mutually compatible relations in the lexicon

Perspectives on Spoken Discourse James Rock, Caterina Pavesi, Pierfranca Forchini, 2014-03-26 This book written for both teachers of English and advanced language students presents research related to spoken discourse carried out by three linguists from the Universit Cattolica del Sacro Cuore The book opens with an article by James Rock on the Common European Framework of Reference and its relevance to the concept of communicative competence and the practice of learning spoken English within the university context In his second article Rock presents an overview of studies on phraseology in the non native speaker setting and shows that initial interest in phraseology in the field of language acquisition highlighted the fact that native like fluency does not stem so much from knowledge of grammatical rules as from features of idiomaticity In the third paper in the collection Caterina Pavesi examines learner English written on the computer and seeks to ascertain the status of this English on the written spoken continuum Learner English has been the object of a great deal of scholarly attention in recent decades but it has not yet been studied in any great depth in its computer mediated form The fourth article in the book examines the language of films traditionally considered to be an artificial form of language not representative of speech and thus of little value in the study of spoken discourse In direct contrast with this view Pierfranca Forchini shows that empirical research on American movies transcribed by her actually proves that the language of movies is extremely similar to conversation along several parameters Adopting Biber's analytical method Multi Dimensional Analysis which attaches a score to features of language and measures the occurrence of these features grouping them into dimensions which can describe different types of discourse Forchini shows that movie language is surprisingly similar to conversational discourse on four out of five dimensions thus overturning the long held view of the status of this type of language and providing scientific justification for using movies to teach features of spoken discourse The research was presented at the Universit Cattolica del Sacro Cuore in Brescia in October 2013 under the auspices of and with the support of the Centro Linguistico dell Universit Cattolica CLUC Arts & Humanities Citation Index ,1995 A multidisciplinary index covering the journal literature of the arts and humanities It fully covers 1 144 of the world s leading arts and humanities journals and it indexes individually selected relevant items from over 6 800 major science and social science journals
