Secularization and Religious Innovation in the North Atlantic World David Hempton, Hugh McLeod, 2017-05-12 In the early twenty first century it had become a cliché that there was a God Gap between a more religious United States and a more secular Europe The apparent religious differences between the United States and western Europe continue to be a focus of intense and sometimes bitter debate between three of the main schools in the sociology of religion According to the influential Secularization Thesis secularization has been an integral part of the processes of modernisation in the Western world since around 1800 For proponents of this thesis the United States appears as an anomaly and they accordingly give considerable attention to explaining why it is different For other sociologists however the apparently high level of religiosity in the USA provides a major argument in their attempts to refute the Thesis Secularization and Religious Innovation in the Atlantic World provides a systematic comparison between the religious histories of the United States and western European countries from the eighteenth to the late twentieth century noting parallels as well as divergences examining their causes and especially highlighting change over time This is achieved by a series of themes which seem especially relevant to this agenda and in each case the theme is considered by two scholars The volume examines whether American Christians have been more innovative and if so how far this explains the apparent God Gap It goes beyond the simple American European binary to ask what is American or European in the Christianity of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries and in what ways national or regional differences outweigh these commonalities

Southern by the Grace of God Megan Hunt, 2024-11-01 Like the media coverage of the civil rights era itself Hollywood dramas have reinforced regional stereotypes of race class and gender to cleanse and redeem the wider nation from the implications of systemic racism As Southern by the Grace of God reveals however Hollywood manipulates southern religion in particular to further enhance this pattern of difference and regional exceptionalism consistently displacing broader American racism through a representation of the poor white southerner who is as religious as he and it is always a he is racist By foregrounding the role of religion in these characterizations Megan Hunt illuminates the pernicious intersections between Hollywood and southern exceptionalism a long standing U S nationalist discourse that has assigned racial problems to the errant South alone enabling white supremacy to not only endure but reproduce throughout the nation Southern by the Grace of God examines the presentation and functions of Protestant Christianity in cinematic depictions of the American South Hunt argues that religion is an understudied signifier of the South on film used with varying degrees of sophistication to define the region's presumed exceptionalism for regional national and international audiences Rooted in close textual analysis and primary research into the production and reception of more than twenty Hollywood films that engage with the civil rights movement and or its legacy this book provides detailed case studies of films that use southern religiosity to negotiate American anxieties around race class and gender Religion Hunt contends is an integral trope of the South in popular culture and especially crucial to the divisions essential to Hollywood storytelling
