1. The first step in the process of the development of the organization is the identification of the organization's mission and vision. This is a critical step as it sets the direction for the organization and provides a clear focus for its activities. The mission statement should be concise and clear, and the vision statement should be aspirational and motivating.

2. The second step is to conduct a SWOT analysis. This involves identifying the organization's strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats. This analysis is essential for understanding the organization's current position and for developing strategies to address its challenges.

3. The third step is to develop a strategic plan. This plan should outline the organization's goals and objectives, and it should specify the actions that need to be taken to achieve these goals. The strategic plan should be realistic and achievable, and it should be reviewed and updated regularly.

4. The fourth step is to implement the strategic plan. This involves putting the plan into action and monitoring progress. It is important to ensure that the organization's resources are allocated effectively and that the plan is being followed. Regular communication and reporting are essential for successful implementation.

5. The fifth step is to evaluate the organization's performance. This involves assessing the organization's progress against its goals and objectives, and identifying areas for improvement. Evaluation should be done regularly and should involve all levels of the organization.

6. The sixth step is to revise the strategic plan. This involves updating the plan to reflect changes in the organization's environment and to incorporate lessons learned from evaluation. The strategic plan should be a living document that evolves over time.

7. The seventh step is to communicate the organization's strategy. This involves ensuring that all employees understand the organization's mission, vision, and strategy, and that they are committed to achieving the organization's goals. Communication should be ongoing and should involve all levels of the organization.
