Algorithms are not neutral: just like traditional classification and regression models, ML algorithms make assumptions about what goes into a model, and what the model is trying to predict.

- Why is machine learning not a good idea? When is machine learning useful?

The machine learning model is a black box, and it's hard to know what's going on inside. It's not clear how the model is making its decisions, and it's hard to know what the model is trying to predict. This is a problem because we need to know what the model is doing to make sure it's not making any mistakes.

- What are the different types of machine learning models?

There are three main types of machine learning models: supervised learning, unsupervised learning, and reinforcement learning. Supervised learning is the most common type of machine learning, and it's used for many different tasks, such as classification and regression.
