As in the previous edition both the Civil Procedure Rules and Human Rights Act 1998 feature prominently as major influences on the shaping of the case law. Attention is also given to impact of the Supreme Court. Here Michael Fordham casts an experienced eye over the Court's work in the area of judicial review and assesses the signs from a Court that will be one of the key influences in the development of judicial review in the modern era. The author a leading member of the English public law bar and now has been involved in many of the leading judicial review cases in recent years and is the founding editor of the Judicial Review journal.

The Selection and Appointment of United States Bankruptcy Judges Francis F. Szczebak, 1994 Sentencing Reform in Overcrowded Times Michael Tonry, Kathleen Hatlestad, 1997-04-24 Sentencing and corrections issues are much the same in every Western country and increasingly efforts are being made to import policies and practices that have succeeded elsewhere This volume brings together articles on sentencing reform in the United States other English speaking countries Australia Canada England Wales New Zealand South Africa and Western Europe by leading national and international authorities on sentencing policy practices and institutions Short timely and readable the articles originally appeared in the journal Overcrowded Times Together they fill a major gap in the academic and policy literatures and will be essential reading for students scholars and practitioners in the field Regulating Judges Richard Devlin, Adam Dodek, 2016-12-30 Regulating Judges presents a novel approach to judicial studies It goes beyond the traditional clash of judicial independence versus judicial accountability Drawing on regulatory theory Richard Devlin and Adam Dodek argue that judicial regulation is multi faceted and requires us to consider the complex interplay of values institutional norms procedures resources and outcomes Inspired by this conceptual framework the book invites scholars from 19 jurisdictions to describe and critique the regulatory regimes for a variety of countries from around the world Injustice in Person Rabeea Assy, 2015-06-04 In common law jurisdictions litigants are free to choose whether to procure legal representation or litigate in person There is no formal requirement that civil litigants obtain legal representation and the court has no power to impose it on them regardless of whether the litigant has the financial means to hire a lawyer or is capable of conducting litigation effectively Self representation is considered indispensable even in circumstances of extreme abuse of process such as in vexatious litigation Intriguingly although self representation is regarded as sacrosanct in common law jurisdictions most civil law systems take a diametrically opposite view and impose obligations of legal representation as a condition for conducting civil litigation except in low value claims courts or specific tribunals This disparity presents a conundrum in comparative law an unfettered freedom to proceed in person is afforded in those legal systems that are more reliant on the litigants professional skills and whose rules of procedure and evidence are more formal complex and adversarial whereas legal representation tends to be made obligatory in systems that are judge based and offer more flexible and informal procedures which would seem intuitively to be more conducive to self representation In Injustice in Person The Right to Self Representation Rabeea Assy assesses the theoretical value of self representation and challenges the conventional wisdom that this should be a fundamental right With a fresh perspective Assy develops a novel justification for mandatory legal representation exploring a number of issues such as the requirements placed by the liberal commitment to personal autonomy on the civil justice system the utility of plain English projects and the extent to which they render the law accessible to lay people and the idea that a high degree of litigant control over the proceedings enhances litigants subjective perceptions of procedural fairness On a practical level the book discusses the question of mandatory representation against the case law of English and American courts and also that of the European Court of Human Rights the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia and the Human Rights Committee
