Everyone Loves Ronald McDonald Andrew Grof, 2015-01-01 This is a zany romp through the modern American landscape with the tour guide one Bingo Sherman, a possible descendant of the controversial Civil War general. Bingo, a joyous cross between Salinger's Holden Caulfield and Kafka's Joseph K, attacks life with a zest that belies his Florida Panhandle origins. In this coming of age novel, the action moves briefly from Miami's South Beach to New York's Upper West Side, then back to South Beach again. Bingo is a seeker with a difference; he has absolutely no idea what he is seeking and knows only what he is not ready to settle for. The characters he encounters along the way serve to both open his eyes as well as to toughen him up for life's many trials still ahead. Throughout the novel looms the almost mythical figure of Ronald McDonald, Bingo's childhood hero for whom he still harbors a soft spot in his heart. Everyone Loves Ronald McDonald strikes just the right tone between irreverence and acute observation and promises a rollicking good experience for anyone with common or even uncommon good sense.

Dick Randall: The Young Athlete Ellery H. Clark, Fall term at Fenton Academy had begun. Dick Randall came slowly down the dormitory steps, then stopped and stood hesitating as if doubtful which way to turn. Uncertainty indeed was uppermost in his mind. He felt confused and out of place in his new surroundings like a stranger in a strange land. The day was dark and gloomy. The sky was overcast and the afternoon sun shone halfheartedly from behind the clouds. A fresh breeze bent the trees in the quadrangle, scattering a shower of leaves about the yard. In spite of himself, Dick felt his spirits flag. A thousand miles lay between him and home, and except for a few brief visits made close at hand, this was his first real venture into the world. Unaccustomed to the change, unacquainted with his classmates with the steady routine of work and play not yet begun, he was wretchedly homesick and strive as he would, he could not keep his thoughts for five minutes together from his father and mother and the white-walled farm house on the slope of the mountain looking down over the valley and the meadowland below. He felt ashamed and disgusted with himself for he was no longer a kid; he was almost seventeen and big and strong for his age and yet fight it as he might, the longing for home would not down. Thus he stood, dreaming, gazing unseeingly across the yard until presently, with a start, he came to himself. A friendly hand smote him between the shoulder blades; a friendly arm was drawn through his and he turned to meet the somewhat quizzical glance of his classmate and next-door neighbor in the dormitory, Harry Allen. Instinctively, Dick smiled.

He had sat next to Allen at supper the night before and had taken a liking to him from the start Allen had chattered away steadily all through the meal yet his talk had been unaffected entertaining and wholly free from any effort at trying to be funny or showing off He was Randall s opposite in every way as slight and frail as Dick was big and broad shouldered as light as Dick was dark and apparently at the present moment as cheerful as Dick was depressed Well Randall he asked what you got on your mind Composing a speech Current Literature ,1918 The Century ,1915 A New Amish Wedding
