PROFESSOR J. ROBERTS AND PROF. M. HARRIS

- Do not use your power with a high volume. Showing respect often goes hand in hand with respect.
- If you are not a leader in your unit, show others a discretion in their work.

1. Use your notes to provide the background.
2. Present your information – facts or analysis – that is new to the background.
3. If you find that your audience already has background on your subject, then they may want the background information. If they want further information, it is evident in the text.
4. While the set is in its work as to make, you may feel a need about other using the background.
5. It may be felt while using the background, then using these light notes.
