Ode to Bully Beef Rosie Serdiville, John Sadler, 2014-03-03 The Second World War 1939 45 was not greeted with the same lavish outpouring of patriotic fervour that had attended August 1914 Any rags of glory had long since been drowned in the mud of Flanders The Great War had been heralded as the war to end all wars veterans were promised a land fit for heroes Both of these vain boasts soon began to sound hollow as depression unemployment poverty and a rash of new wars followed The sons and daughters of those who had embarked upon their own patriotic Calvary did so again in an altogether more sombre spirit One significant difference between the two conflicts is that whilst both were industrial wars the Second World War was far nearer the concept of total war The growth of strategic air power in its infancy in 1918 had by 1939 become a reality In this war even more widespread and terrible than the last there were to be no civilians Death sought new victims everywhere British citizens were now in the front line there was to be no respite no hiding place This is the poetry and prose of those who were there ordinary people caught in the terrible maelstrom of mass conflict on a scale hitherto unimagined this is their testimony

Hunzeker, 2021-07-15 In Dying to Learn Michael Hunzeker develops a novel theory to explain how wartime militaries learn. He focuses on the Western Front which witnessed three great power armies struggle to cope with deadlock throughout the First World War as the British, French and German armies all pursued the same solutions: assault tactics, combined arms and elastic defense in depth. By the end of the war only the German army managed to develop and implement a set of revolutionary offensive, defensive and combined arms doctrines that in hindsight represented the best way to fight. Hunzeker identifies three organizational variables that determine how fighting militaries generate new ideas: distinguish good ones from bad ones and implement the best of them across the entire organization. These factors are the degree to which leadership delegates authority on the battlefield, how effectively the organization retains control over soldier and officer training, and whether or not the military possesses an independent doctrinal assessment mechanism. Through careful study of the British, French and German experiences in the First World War Dying to Learn provides a model that shows how a resolute focus on analysis, command and training can help prepare modern militaries for adapting amidst high intensity warfare in an age of revolutionary technological change.

Military Agility Meir Finkel, 2020-09-01 The need to quickly enter into conflict and succeed in the initial engagements is an enduring demand on militaries around the world. Given today's dynamic geopolitical environment, the concept of successful rapid transition or organizational and mental readiness is more relevant than ever. Using the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) as a case study, Meir Finkel explores four important but generally neglected challenges of a swift transition from peace to wartime operations. He investigates the challenging mental transition from peace or routine security employment to a higher intensity mode of action in combat. Then Finkel explains that militaries must be capable of rapidly resolving debated prewar concepts and doctrine even as war breaks out. He also discusses how to integrate and employ new weapons systems delivered at the last minute or during a conflict. Lastly, he delves into methods for managing the tension between the need to win every tactical engagement in low intensity conflict and the preparation of forces for a high intensity conflict. With clear applications for the IDF and US armed services, Finkel's study offers specific examples of hard to accomplish rapid transitions as well as broad suggestions for how to improve readiness. Military Agility will appeal to military personnel and leadership strategists, historians with an interest in comparative analysis and policymakers.
