teams of scholars and community partners examines how civic agriculture is unfolding across urban landscapes led largely by community organizations

Section 4 written by planning practitioners and scholars documents local government planning tied to urban agriculture focusing especially on how they address questions of equity

Section 5 explores UA as a locus of pedagogy of equity

Section 6 places the UA movement in the US within a global context and concludes with ideas and challenges for the future

The book concludes with a call for planning as public nurturance an approach that can be illustrated through urban agriculture

Planning as public nurturance is a value explicit process that centers an ethics of care especially protecting the interests of publics that are marginalized

It builds the capacity of marginalized groups to authentically co design and participate in planning policy processes

Such a planning approach requires that progress toward equitable outcomes is consistently evaluated through accountability measures

And finally such an approach requires attention to structural and institutional inequities

Addressing these four elements is more likely to create a condition under which urban agriculture may be used as a lever in the planning and development of more just and equitable cities
