

A garden vegetable garden contains a variety of eggplants.

Keep the seedlings well spaced to give them room to grow.

To make rows profitable to help drainage.

Rate lightly into the soil, then water in well. Make a furrow for the seeds and plant according to the instructions on the seed packet. Most packs provide information on seed spacing, depth to sow, and sowing times for climate regions. Then cover the seeds with a light covering of fertile soil to the depth recommended on the seed package.

Step 5: After-Care

Water is important to vegetables for them to reach full size and flourish. Avoid deep watering is preferable to alternate low watering. Check this soil regularly and keep moist.

Feeding

Vegetables require regular doses of either organic or artificial fertilisers to generate growth, especially in nutrient-poor soils. Animal manure or Blood and Bone combined with regular applications of liquid fertilisers such as Aggro or Trevo encourage healthy crops.

Organic fertilisers include garden compost, Blood and Bone, Bone Meal and animal manure. They release nutrients slowly to the soil and help to improve soil structure and retain moisture. They are not readily washed through the soil by watering or rain. Green manure crops, such as clover and beans (legumes) also improve soil condition and fertility when dug back into the soil after cropping. Artificial or inorganic fertilisers are made from naturally occurring minerals and provide nutrients in a concentrated form. Generally, plants respond quite rapidly to these fertilisers, but they are easily washed through soil by watering or rain.

Pest and Disease

A wide range of insects and diseases can afflict an entire vegetable bed. These can be controlled in a large extent with insecticides and pesticides (refer BluePlan 848). Control common garden pests. If using any spray for insect or disease control, always check the withholding period applicable on the container. This is the time between the last spray and the harvest allowed because there will be no harmful chemical residue.

However, prevention through good garden hygiene is the best strategy. Remove weeds by hand or with a garden fork. Or use mulch to suppress weed growth. Inspect plants regularly for any little leaf showing signs for or disease symptoms and dispose of any spent crops that may be diseased.

Companion Planting

A good way to protect your plants from pests and diseases and to have help for the kitchen is to use companion plants. These are plants that when planted with other plants in a group help each other to grow or deter pests and diseases. Not all plants grow together and though. For example, Broad Beans do not like to be planted with onions yet when planted with cabbages and other leafy crops they and their companions, flowers. Use the Vegetable Planting Guide to select suitable companion plants for your vegetables.
