

The US high school dropout epidemic paints a grim picture of the country's educational future. Each year, many of the students who enroll in the elementary level fail to graduate from high school. What is even more worrying is the trend where many of the students abandon school with less than two years to graduation. Various studies have indicated approximately a third of all public high school students do not see out their high school years where about a half of this group is from the Hispanics, Native Americans and African American communities.

This recurrent problem has led to various initiatives to explore extend of the crisis in addition to finding the reasons and possible solutions to arrest the dropout rate. Timely solutions are necessary especially since there has not been a substantial improvement in the figures even after the education reforms of the past few decades. Consequently, this essay explores the extend of high school dropout rate while suggesting the possible reasons why many students do not stay in school until graduation in addition to providing possible solutions to end the cycle.

Statistics notes the current annual high school dropout figure to be 3,030,000 (Education Week, 2013). The high number of high school dropouts in US educational system has not gone unnoticed given the number of national policies that have been put in place over the years to reverse the cycle. The year 1990 recorded a change in the way the state and federal government handled the issue of high school dropouts through adoption of six national goals that were to be achieved by the year 2000. The second goal in the six national goals underlies the government's commitment towards improving the high school graduation rate up to 90 percent in addition to an undertaking which would see the prevailing gap in high school graduation rates among minority and non-minority students eliminated. The six national goals for the reduction of high school dropout rate has had a significant impact as seen from the decreasing levels of drop outs

High School Dropout, Graduation, and Completion Rates National Academy of Education, National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Center for Education, Committee for Improved Measurement of High School Dropout and Completion Rates: Expert Guidance on Next Steps for Research and Policy Workshop, 2011-04-17 High school graduation and dropout rates have long been used as indicators of educational system productivity and effectiveness and of social and economic well being While determining these rates may seem like a straightforward task their calculation is in fact quite complicated How does one count a student who leaves a regular high school but later completes a GED How does one count a student who spends most of his/her high school years at one school and then transfers to another If the student graduates which school should receive credit If the student drops out which school should take responsibility High School Dropout Graduation and Completion Rates addresses these issues and to examine 1 the strengths limitations accuracy and utility of the available dropout and completion measures 2 the state of the art with respect to longitudinal data systems and 3 ways that dropout and completion rates can be used to improve policy and practice School Dropouts in the United States Aaron M. Pallas, 1986 School Dropout and Completion Stephen Lamb, Eifred Markussen, Richard Teese, Nina Sandberg, John Polesel, 2010-11-29 School dropout remains a persistent and critical issue in many school systems so much so that it is sometimes referred to as a crisis Populations across the globe have come to depend on success at school for establishing careers and gaining access to post school qualifications Yet large numbers of young people are excluded from the advantages that successful completion of school brings and as a result are subjected to consequences such as higher likelihood of unemployment lower earnings greater dependence on welfare and poorer physical health and well being Over recent decades most western nations have stepped up their efforts to reduce drop out and raise school completion rates while maintaining high standards How school systems have approached this and how successful they are varies This book compares the various approaches by evaluating their impact on rates of dropout and completion Case studies of national systems are used to highlight the different approaches including institutional arrangements and the various alternative secondary school programs and their outcomes The evaluation is based on several key questions What are the main approaches How do they work For whom do they work And how successful are they in promoting high rates of completion and equivalent outcomes for all This book examines the nature of the dropout problem in advanced industrialized countries with the goal of developing a broader international understanding that can feed into public policy to help improve completion rates worldwide Resources in Education, 2001-10 Chicano School Failure and Success Richard R.
