The Future of Disaster Management in the U.S.

Amy LePore, 2016-12-08 U S congressional debates over the last few years have highlighted a paradox although research demonstrates that emergencies are most effectively managed at the local level fiscal support and programmatic management in response to disasters has shifted to the federal level While the growing complexity of catastrophes may overwhelm local capacities and would seem to necessitate more federal engagement can a federal approach be sustainable and can it contribute to local capacity building This timely book examines local capacity building as well as the current legal policy and fiscal framework for disaster management questioning some of the fundamentals of the current system exploring whether accountability and responsibilities are correctly placed offering alternative models and taking stock of the current practices that reflect an effective use of resources in a complex emergency management system The Future of Disaster Management in the U S will be of interest to disaster and emergency managers as well as public servants and policy makers at all levels tasked with responding to increasingly complex catastrophes of all kinds

Of Rainfalls and Disasters

Juan Manuel Rodríguez Esteves , Disasters associated with natural phenomena such as earth quakes floods droughts etcetera are intensifying damages that translate into deaths the loss of infrastructure and the interruption of economic activities The accelerated growth of cities frequently incorporates new areas that are susceptible to certain hazards leaving society increasingly exposed due to a mismanagement of land Since the 1990s the social sciences have developed the approach of vulnerability which considers the conditions of weakness of a society to cope with hazards We now know that risk is socially constructed and so disasters are not only a result of the intensity of the geophysical phenomena that unleash them but also of the contexts of vulnerability present when a phenomenon takes place The aim of this work is to show how the risk of flood disasters is constructed in Tijuana Baja California with four main elements as our starting point An examination of floods since the late 19th century the voice of the actors present for flooding events a theoretical model to understand the relationship between the hazard and the magnitude of the risk and recommendations for disaster risk management at a local level
