Organic fertilizers include garden compost, blood and bone, kelp meal and animal manures. They release nutrients slowly in the soil and help to improve soil structure and retain moisture. They are not readily washed through the soil by watering or rain. Green manure crops, such as grass and beans (legumes) also improve soil conditions and fertility when they break into the soil after cropping. Artificial or inorganic fertilizers are made from naturally occurring minerals and provide nutrients in a concentrated form. Generally, plants respond quite rapidly to these fertilizers, but they are easily washed through soil by watering or rain.

This is the time between the last spray and the harvest of food and animals there will be no harmful chemical residues.

Flowers preventers through good garden hygiene is the best strategy. Remove weeds by hand or with a garden fork. Or use mulch to suppress weed growth. Inspect plants regularly for any little leaf's hatching, even to or-din-ary ones, and dispose of any weed areas that may be discovered.

Companion Planting

A good way to protect your plants from pests and diseases is to choose healthy, disease-free seedlings to grow companion plants. These are plants that when planted with other plants in a group help each other to grow or deter pests and diseases. Not all plants grow together well though. For example Broad Beans do not like to be planted with onions, potatoes planted with cabbage and other leafy crops may, and their companions, then. Use the Vegetable Planting Guide to select a suitable companion plant for your vegetables.
