

Genetic Mutations

What mistakes can occur when DNA is replicated?

Why?

The genes encoded in your DNA result in the production of proteins that perform specific functions within your cells. Various environmental factors and spontaneous events can lead to changes in genes. These changes, called mutations, can lead to alterations in the structure and activity of the proteins your cells use in their daily activities. In other words, changes to your genotype can result in changes to your phenotype. We all have mutations in most of our body cells—yet we are, for the most part, normal and functional human beings. How can that be?

Darwinian Populations and Natural Selection Peter Godfrey-Smith, 2009-03-26 In 1859 Darwin described a deceptively simple mechanism that he called natural selection a combination of variation inheritance and reproductive success He argued that this mechanism was the key to explaining the most puzzling features of the natural world and science and philosophy were changed forever as a result The exact nature of the Darwinian process has been controversial ever since however Godfrey Smith draws on new developments in biology philosophy of science and other fields to give a new analysis and extension of Darwin s idea The central concept used is that of a Darwinian population a collection of things with the capacity to undergo change by natural selection From this starting point new analyses of the role of genes in evolution the application of Darwinian ideas to cultural change and evolutionary transitions that produce complex organisms and societies are developed Darwinian Populations and Natural Selection will be essential reading for anyone interested in evolutionary theory Popular Science , 2005-09 Popular Science gives our readers the information and tools to improve their technology and their world The core belief that Popular Science and our readers share The future is going to be better and science and technology are the driving forces that will help make it better From Darwin to Eden William B.
