This often involves factors such as where the population is found and how the size and composition of these populations are regulated by demographic processes of fertility, mortality, and migration.

According to Wilbur Zelensky, "the sciences deals with how the geographic character of a, its distribution and the changes taking place over some time. places are formed by and, in turn, reacts upon a set of population phenomena that vary within it through both space and time interacting one with another, and with numerous non-demographic phenomena."
