in a dress that glistened like tiny hands. Annabella was talking.

The study draws on a bespoke corpus of 2.5 million words of written materials and transcribed classroom recordings provided by the project's partner schools. It combines quantitative and qualitative approaches to the corpus data to explore linguistic variation across school levels, registers and subjects, describes the procedures of corpus compilation and analysis of written and spoken academic language, showing how modern corpus tools can be applied to this far reaching social and educational issue. It uncovers differences and similarities between the academic language that school children are exposed to at primary and secondary school, contrasting this against the backdrop of the non-academic language that they encounter outside school. This book is important reading for advanced students and researchers in corpus linguistics, applied linguistics and teacher education. It carries implications for policymakers and
