For instance, research in the marketing of household electric products (the industry conducted the research) has shown that customers are attracted to the fact an appliance has a built-in computer that controls the product as well as its operation. But, surprisingly, 60% of our customers don't like this. In fact, our customers are more likely to purchase a product that is simple and easy to use than one that is complex and difficult to use. This is a common theme in the marketing of household electric products. The research also shows that customers are more likely to purchase a product that is simple and easy to use than one that is complex and difficult to use. This is a common theme in the marketing of household electric products.
